

Bruce Dinges, writing in the Journal of Arizona History, Autumn 1993, offered this commentary: For much of the early half of [the twentieth] century, Sharlot Hall was an indomitable presence in Arizona life and letters. As territorial historian, she was the first woman appointed to public office, her published prose and poetry celebrated the beauty of the Southwest, and her dedicated efforts restored and preserved the governor's mansion in Prescott. In Sharlot Herself... Nancy Wright provides a private glimpse of this public woman... An introduction by Margaret Maxwell, Sharlot's biographer, nicely sets the stage for what follows. Period photographs and whimsical drawings by Carlos Parra round out this handsome tribute to a remarkable and fascinating Arizona original.

Sugar Daddy (Sugar Bowl), Gentry: Social Change in Java: the Tale of a Family, Love the Fiddler, Matting and Framing Made Easy, A Modern Idyll, An Unmarried Man, A Doubters Almanac, Hayalimdeki Arzular ve Ihtiraslar,
