The first thing to know is that regional Yucatecan cuisine is unlike any Mexican food youve probably had before, thanks to the areas Mayan traditions, tropical climate, and historic geographical position as an important land and coastal trade route. Its not just corn, beans, and tomatoes; its pumpkin (and pumpkin seeds), naranja agria (sour orange), habanero chiles, annatto seeds, turkey, and fish, with global influences from Europe to the Middle East and, of course, the Caribbean.
